GEORGE BERNARD SHAW SAYS IS EDUCATION WORTHWHILE?

In commenting on the new Harvard University in Palestine, George Bernard Shaw said "We are experiencing with universities, does not justify any in cogitating James on the acquisition of one."

Shaw is a "testy old grouch." Knowing this we could dismiss his remark without comment. The thought, however, is prevalent in many quarters, especially in America where many who wear "the laurels of success have eluded their entire education in the school of experience. Abraham Lincoln is typical of the thousands to whom credit of educational institutions refers when they argue that higher education is necessary."

Many years ago, in Massachusetts, a father raised a family of five boys. The four older ones were all that ambitious father could wish. The youngest was a disappointment. In the first few years completed their college courses and decorated their personal cards with such significant symbols of achievement. The fourth oldest, A. B., Ph. D. and C. The youngest, still the little black sheep of the flock, worked for a living. During the following ten years the educated brothers filled their various niches in a respectable manner, but they failed miserably in garnering their share of the world's riches. The youngest one, however, and contrary to expectations, conceived a cold cure, put it on the market and made millions from its universal sale. About the time that the educated brothers returned from college, the youngest one began to add the myriads of initials, P. D. E. to his signature. For ten years he continued the custom, revealing his motive to no one. Finally, success came. He took the prize of $100,000 and announced that he had been his place.

Such experiences, and there are many of them, provide ammunition for those who would condemn educational institutions. Gold analysis proves, however, that such successes are made in spite of the education, rather than because of it. Study these figures:

The man who only a grammar school education earns an average of $1,200 a year.

The high school graduate earns a total of about $17,000, or $53,000 more than the man with the grammar school education.

The college graduate earns during his active life a total of $156,000, $72,000 more than the high school man, and averaged over $5,000 a year.

A student thus receives an average return of $335 for every year of study. $11,000 for eight years—pretty good compensation for his effort.

The school expense, "we pay in money." It is an investment in human possibilities. Good investments pay regular dividends.

The way of the Substitutes

In 1922, Canada imported from Wales 166,487 tons of hard coal. In 1923, this amount rose to 240,000 tons. In 1924, to 273,435 tons, while for five months of 1925, an even larger rate of increase was maintained. America exports a large quantity of hard coal to Canada. A Canadian article can be retailed in Montreal for $11.76 for a ton and $16.80 charged for freight. The fact that Wales coal is steadily gaining in favor of dealers in this coal claim that there is more demand for the Welsh coal than there is one and a quarter tons of American anthracite, that it is a cleaner coal, and, in every way, better value for the money. Unhappily, a large number of Canadians people are already persuaded that this is the case.

Competition is keen, and now comes the strike. If a prolonged stoppage of work in the American mines should result in a large export to Canada for any considerable time, an even larger demand of Canadian people will be the habit of using Welsh coal. As a well-known financial paper remarked, recently, "when we learn to use a substitute for something which they have previously been accustomed, they are apt to continue the use of the substitute."

The possibility of losing the Canadian market altogether, as a result of the present strike, at any rate, is to be envisaged by American coal operators and miners alike.—Des Moines Independent.

A greedy train is like a tape-worm in the body politic: you can chop it off as much as you please, but if you don't get the head it keeps right on with the work of sapping the substance of the people.

It was noticed when you just a head that they charge you just as much for a little bed as they do for a big bed. They charge you just as much for a little mattress as they do for a big mattress. They charge you just as much for a little spring as they do for a big spring.

Now anybody knows that it costs more to make a double mattress than it does to make a single bed; that it costs more to make a double mattress than it does to make a single bed; that it costs more to make a double mattress than it does to make a single bed.

The state has manufacturing centers which must be fed, and trucking offers on a conservative scale opportunities full of possibilities. The trucking industry is of considerable size in neither practical nor profitable under the hand handicaps of the tenant farmer and the cross mortgage method of farm financing.

REPORT ON CHESTER'S JAIL AND COUNTY HOME

State Board of Public Welfare Sends Result of Its Inspection of the State Board of Public Welfare, as to Chester County Jail, County Home and Chaining.

The News in receipt of the following report from Mr. Ellison Capers, assistant secretary of the State Board of Public Welfare, as to Chester County jail, county home and chaining:

County Jail

"The outstanding changes at the Chester County jail are the reduction of the dieting fee from twenty-five cents to thirty cents per month for each prisoner, and the painting of the steel work of the jail."

As usual for the past several years the plumbing is in bad repair, screens are worn out, and the bedding and cells need better ventilation.

"Chester County has one of the best jail-plants in the state but has been neglecting its management the jail and its equipment has suffered to a great extent. If responsibility for the present jail and its equipment was definitely fixed by the sheriff on one person, no doubt, the Chester County jail and its population would benefit considerably."

County Home

"No improvement of value have been made in the Chester County Almshouse within the past year. A small water tank has been erected which increases the water facilities somewhat. The buildings and furnishings need repair or replacements—again, the bedding and the furniture need care for twenty inmates with the poor convalescent buildings and modern conveniences."

At the present time negro and ten white prisoners are serving time on the Chester County chain gang. The camp equipment is about the same as last year—a new range and screens are needed for the kitchen. The bedding and the furniture need care for twenty inmates with the poor convalescent buildings and modern conveniences."

It is recommended that the Chester County Engineer estimate the value of the road work accomplished by the chain gang for the year 1925, and with this information determine whether or not the Chester County chain gang is an asset or a liability.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS WILL LIVE FOREVER

Some books are read, and then thrown away. Some pictures are seen and then forgotten. The life of an ordinary movie—the society drama or comedy, is a best-seller. Classics of literature like "Hamlet" and Emerson's "Essay on Compensation" live throughout generations and are read again and again. "The Ten Commandments" is a theme so great, a sweep so large, and so elaborately produced, that it is one of the small group of films which will never die. As a fine book can be read over and over again, so a picture like this can be looked at more than once without losing its flavor. Cecil B. DeMille's cinematograph will be shown at the Dreamland Theatre, beginning Monday, for a run of five days, at a popular scale of prices.—Adv.

The contract for the erection of the city's abattoir, which were destroyed by fire some time ago, has been let for the sum of $24,450. Others to bid on the building were J. W. Wylie, $25,671; Yandell and Burke, $2,900; Piedmont Contracting Co., $2,930; C. W. Higgins, $1,000. Work on the building is to be commenced at once and will be in charge of the Public Buildings Commission.

Through an oversight of the "Bringing Up Father," the advertisement which was left with The News last Tuesday did not specify that the show would be at the Chester Opera House. The play comes to Chester highly recommended and is being offered at popular prices. Seats are on sale at the Chester Drug Store. The show will appear tomorrow night, October 10th.

"Yes sir, I like you Southern people and the south," said a Tourist who was passing through Chester this week. "There's all the difference in the world between you folks and the people back up our way. This is especially so when it comes to the new building on Gadsden street, next to the Commercial Bank building. The presses and folding machine will probably be moved into the new location next week. Those having business with The News are asked to call on the new location."

The News is endeavoring to move its entire plant without missing an issue of the paper and so far, it has made good. It is the intent of the management to also move the presses, etc., without missing an issue.

Mr. Warren H. Booker, of Charlotte, has been employed by city council to make a survey of Chester in connection with the proposed water works and sewerage improvements at a salary not to exceed $1,500, all plans he might make to be the property of the city. If he should be selected to supervise the work of improvements the amount above stipulated will then be a part of his commission.

Mrs. Cora Cox Lucas has given up her apartment in the Charles Edward and left for Greensboro, N. C., where she will spend the winter with her son, Robert. For the last week, since her furniture was shipped, she has been visiting Mrs. Carl Summer on Henderson street and went yesterday to Chester to visit for a day or so en route to Greensboro. It is gratifying to Mrs. Lucas' friends to be assured that her absence is only temporary. Mrs. Lucas and her young son will keep house this winter in an attractive cottage next door to the home of her elder son, Edwin Lucas.

A report issued by the government yesterday reported an indicated yield of 14,759,000 bales of cotton this year. The report yesterday was more than 400,000 bales ahead of the last report issued and caused cotton to tumble about six dollars a bale. The earnings this year was reported at 7,101,710 bales. The report indicates a yield of 850,000 bales in South Carolina this year.

J. E. Spann, president of the Chester Cotton Producers Association, states that it is proposed to make this year's fair the best in the history of the organization. Company and also individual exhibits are being asked for and it is hoped that a large display of county products will be brought in. Arrangements are also being made for a midway attraction. The horse races will also be a feature of the fair this year. The fair will be held from November tenth through the thirtieth. Attractive prizes are being offered in all departments.

Is It For High Schools?

It is amusing to read the drive which continues to follow in the wake of the defunct Scopes case. By perceptible degrees, a twist meaning is given, the event until now some writers are bewailing that Mr. Scopes was "prohibited from making 'scientific' remarks" and that the children in his class were denied the privilege of delving deeply into biological problems. Mr. Scopes, of course, knows nothing of evolution except what he has read in the textbooks, and much of what he knows. By that method he will have to discard in ten years, if he still follows the textbooks, because of the revisions which will ensue. The great difficulty in the educational aspect of the controversy is that there are no biologists teaching evolution in the high schools; there are merely teachers who are just one jump ahead of the pupils in the study of the textbooks.

A scientist who is a naturalist and an evolutionist writes us a letter, one paragraph of which we lift from among other wise observations to share with our readers:

Every farmer is urged to "cut his cotton" stalks at once. The cutting of cotton stalks now is considered to be the most effective measure of protection against the boll weevil in 1925. Early destruction of stalks now will mean several million dollars additional cotton next season.

"Beyond doubt evolution should not be taught in the common schools any more than higher mathematics or spectrum analysis of the stars, for the simple reason that it cannot be comprehended, except by specialists of long training. If 99 out of 100 high school teachers of biology or science were asked what they knew about the gradual variations between species and genera of marked transitional character they would be at sea."—Dearborn

PICNIC OF LEPERS

Story of an incident in Palestine
Years Ago

That settlement of lepers at Kalaupapa, on the island of Molokai, made famous by Father Damien, is only one of the saddest spots on earth, as it was described in The New York Telegram's editorial, "White Men of Molokai," on August 12. There is another of these and spots in Palestine, but it is a little cheering to know that efforts are made, and somewhat successfully, to lighten the gloom.

We are indebted to Professor H. T. Frensch, of No. 26, South St. Cloud street, Allentown, Pa., for the following:

"There are picnics and picnics galore, but I am sure no picnic has ever been enjoyed or done by lepers as much as this one about which I am writing."

"Some fifty-five years ago a lady visitor in Palestine became greatly interested in the helpless, suffering lepers who saw along the roadside. She became the head of a committee, organized to establish a leper home at Jerusalem. It was built on the heights overlooking the city. Then the next thing was to apply to the Moravian Deaconess Home at Nieke, Germany, for nurses to take entire charge of the lepers. Ever since then the Moravians have devoted themselves to the Jesus Help Home in the United States."

"This year the matron, Angelina Neugebauer—she has been with the lepers for more than twenty years—had charge of the picnic that went by a roundabout way to the Jordan. She has written some of the features of the trip which will surely interest your readers: 'The lepers came to me to remind me of the annual picnic that was promised those strong enough to go, by Dr. Cassan. As it was now already the middle of March, it was all important to go at once, because later it becomes too hot on the plains. A good friend procured a motor lorry for us. We wanted to leave quite early, before the sun had risen, but as usual in this country the lorry came late."

"All went well till we reached the Dead Sea, where the lepers were much benefited by a bath in the salty water. Then we enjoyed our dinner of bread and cheese with water we had brought along in jugs. Now we were ready to set out for the Jordan, with high hopes of reaching there safely. But hardly had we started when our lorry stuck fast in the desert, far from any shade or water. Seeing that it was impossible to move for the present, I returned to the huts near the Dead Sea to boil a can of coffee."

"Finally, after a delay of four hours, we were able to move to firmer ground. The question now was, Shall we return to Jerusalem or spend the night out on the Jericho Plains? The lepers were delighted to do the latter. The night was very cold, but towards midnight we built a comfortable fire."

"Next morning we again started for the Jordan, as we expected no further delays."

"The road led through high, picturesque mountains to the Jordan Bridge. Beyond the road was too marshy to visit the spot where Christ was baptized. Hence we returned by the shortest way to the Jesus Help at Jerusalem."

"All fatigue and delay was forgotten by the lepers. They were delighted to relate their experiences and the reason why we had not returned the day before to this shut-in lepers. Now their next letter day will be Christmas, when a tree will adorn their home. Many little presents from distant sympathizing friends will be given them."—New York Telegram.
